When a person is born, he is first of all formed and developed in the family. The family environment is the first step in the comprehensive formation of a person and helps him find his place in society. The family is a center of education that ensures the eternity of life, continuity of generations, preserves our sacred traditions, and at the same time directly affects the future generations. The concepts of love for the motherland, faith, belief, responsibility, humanity, and culture are instilled in our young people in the family through our sacred traditions. The family in which they live is the foundation for Uiar to become a perfect person, to find his place in life, and to embody high moral rules.

The emergence of a unique spirituality in the family depends on the fact that each of the family members has a certain spiritual world as an individual, and on the results of communication between them. Raising a child in a family is very complicated, because every family is a unique universe. A person matures in the family, it is very important to form conscious responsibility in the person. Such a responsible task is carried out by parents. In short, they are responsible for the education of a child who is thirsty for knowledge, intelligent, insightful, and has strong thinking for the development of society. They need to deeply understand their duties and responsibilities in raising their children. Giving children manners starts with the family first of all. The children of parents who have good morals will also have good morals. Our grandfather Abdulla Avloni said the following about the first lessons of child education in his work "Turkish Gulistan or Morality": "It is necessary to start education from the day of birth, to strengthen our body, to clarify our mind" For a child, a healthy social and spiritual environment in the family is a source of cultural, spiritual and moral values, traditions and social experiences, skills and qualifications. It is polished in the process of family education. The essence of education is to prepare a person for life, and the content, direction, purpose and function of education depend on the social relations of people. According to these relationships, the child looks at life in a certain way, understands the world through his thinking and forms his attitude towards it, is educated in the spirit of certain moral standards. Loving children, feeding them and idolizing them in their own way, but raising our children from their youth on the basis of national education and high spirituality, it is always important for us.

A polite, knowledgeable and intelligent, hardworking, faithful child is the greatest wealth not only of parents, but also of the entire society. A person who has healthy, polite and intelligent children is truly rich. In fact, it is the core of morality and spirituality. Human morality is not just greetings and politeness. Morality is primarily a sense of fairness and justice, honesty. The role and influence of the family in forming and improving the unique spirituality of any nation is incomparable. Because the purest, purest feelings of a person, the first ideas and concepts of life are first formed in the bosom of the family. Therefore, parents should be a personal example. In order for our children to grow up to be healthy individuals, it is necessary to ensure harmony at home. If the mother says something, the father should support her, even if it is wrong, he should not be silent. It may be true, but this mistake should not be corrected in front of the child.

The fact that parents correct their mistakes with their children has a negative effect on the formation of the child's personality. If the father and the mother say different things at home and the child is forced to follow both of them, then the child's personality will not be formed. This is how successful and flattering individuals develop in society. In order for the child's identity to be formed and his place in society, parents should work together. The father blames the mother and the mother blames the father. In this case, the child takes an example from the father, or from the mother. If both sides blame each other, the child can take another person as an example. But we do not know what kind of person he will take as an example. It should be clear who is the head of the family. Respect and cooperation between parents is very important in raising a child. Children cannot develop socially and morally in families where parents cannot get along and are not united. In a family, if the parents pull the cart in both directions, the child does not know which one to obey. Later, he starts using both for his own benefit. Children who cannot move independently, who always need their parents, who do not believe in themselves, come from equal families. In strong families, parents work together, when there is a problem, they work together and consult. If the position of the mother is high in the family, if the man also fulfills his duties, the emotional development of the child will not be enough, as a result, the child will not be satisfied with love. The effect of this can be felt for a lifetime. If the father is not a suitable man, there may be problems with the sexual formation of the boy.

The fact that the mother does not have a characteristic characteristic of women can cause the same problem for girls. Children whose parents are divorced may also have psychological problems. The biggest sorrow for children is separation from their parents. One of the main conditions of being a parent is to be patient. In China, the seeds of a bamboo tree germinate in five years. As Chinese people patiently wait for these five years, we must also be patient so that our children grow up to be good people.

If the seed does not grow, let the soil be ashamed.

Shame on the one who didn't hit the target.

Oh, vulture soars to the vastness,

Shame on the woman who gave birth to a son!

We need to be able to accept our children as they are, if we can't accept them with their mistakes, they will grow up to be people who lie and make fake actions to hide their faults. And we should pay special attention to this, that we should never compare them to others, especially to our own brothers, sisters, and brothers. If the child is not able to show the same results, he tries to hide his bad luck with a lie. Then you think that if I am an honest and honorable person, why should my child become a forester? In fact, it is our selfishness that causes it to come to this state. Therefore, a personal example is of particular importance in education. It is not for nothing that it is said that a bird does what it sees in its nest. How should parents behave for this? — A person who strives for his goals in any situation, who can create the conditions he needs, who bravely accepts every moment and uses it wisely, who has self-respect in work and home life, in relationships one should try to be able to approach people and negative situations correctly, as well as be able to control one's desires and wishes, not succumb to bad luck and not brag about one's successes! It should not be forgotten that our children will grow up not as we want them to be, but as we have raised them.
